HOOVER IS TOLD THAT MIDWEST IS FOR HIM

REPORTS FROM FIVE STATES OF MIDWEST AREA

WISCONSIN, ILLINOIS, MINNESOTA, IOWA AND INDIANA

CAMPAIGN IS SAID TO BE GETTING UNDER WAY IN FINE SHAPE

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Aboard Hoover Special Train, near Superior, Wis., July 16.—Herbert Hoover, republican presidential nominee, was informed the midwest is safe by republican leaders whom he met in his hasty westward trip to visit President Coolidge at the summer White House on the Brule.

In Wisconsin, Illinois, Minnesota, Iowa and Indiana republicans of responsibility brought the word that the campaign is getting under way in such fine shape they believed the republican presidential nominee could count on this vital political area.

Those who agreed upon the conclusion included Gov. Fred R. Zimmerman of Wisconsin, Vice President Charles G. Dawes, who was the host to the candidate for four hours in Chicago and Rep. Walter Newton, Minnesota.

The first words of encouragement from the outlying battle scouts had an obvious effect upon the candidate's entourage. When he left Washington Saturday night he appeared tired from the arduous task of cleaning up business at the commerce department, but yesterday he was all smiles.

At every train stop he went out to see crowds that gathered. He assured them all he could make no political speeches until after his acceptance of the nomination at Palo Alto, Calif., August 11. He expressed gratification that they had come out to see him.

Last night he retired after the train left Madison so he could be up promptly for the arrival in Superior this morning. He and Mrs. Hoover will be guests of the president and Mrs. Coolidge until tomorrow night when the candidate will resume his journey to the Pacific coast.

Hoover and the president are expected to discuss what part the president will play in the campaign. It will be the first time the two have met since the nomination at Kansas City. Hoover also is looking forward to some fishing. Like the president, he is an enthusiastic angler.

OLD LEADER AND THE NEW MEET

Superior, Wis., July 16.—(U.P.)—The old leader and the new leader of the republican party discussed the political state of the nation here today when Herbert Hoover, presidential nominee, came to see President Coolidge at the summer White House.

Going 10,000 miles out of his way to the Pacific coast in order to confer with the chief executive, Hoover arrived here on his special train at 8:30 a. m. central time. He went immediately to the presidential lodge 30 miles out.

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge met the candidate and his wife as they drove up the narrow trail and escorted them into the house where they talked over first the plans for the day. Hoover said he would like to go fishing sometime this afternoon or tomorrow.

Hoover was met at the station by a crowd of several hundred republican leaders headed by former Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin. They carried banners "Hoover for President," "Superior is for Hoover" and "Wisconsin is for Hoover."

REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN FUND BUDGET PLANNED

Washington, July 16.—(U.P.)—The republican campaign fund budget, expected to total between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000, will be drawn up here this week. J. R. Nutt, Cleveland, treasurer of the republican national committee, will arrive here Wednesday for a series of conferences on the subject with Chairman Hubert Work of the committee, it was announced today.

Three Bandits, Faces Painted Like Indians, Operate in Brooklyn

Brooklyn, July 16.—(U.P.)—Three bandits, their faces painted like Indians on the war path, held up three men in a restaurant here today.

Two women screamed for police from nearby windows when they saw the holdup. The bandits fled with $250 in cash and a diamond ring valued at $750.

Russ Ice Breaker Krassin Rescues 9 Men Today

BELGIUM NOMINATES HUGHES AS JUDGE OF WORLD COURT

Geneva, July 16.—(U.P.)—Belgium today nominated Charles Evans Hughes as the first choice for the vacant judgeship in the world court at The Hague. Baron Rolin Jaquemyns was named second choice. Several other nations have nominated Hughes, who now is visiting in Vienna, for the post.

GOV. AL SMITH AVERSE TO LONG DISTANCE ROWS

DECLINES TO CONTINUE ARGUING WITH WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE

KANSAS EDITOR HAD ATTACKED LEGISLATIVE RECORD OF SMITH

By PERCY B. SCOTT
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Albany, N. H., July 16.—Governor Alfred E. Smith is averse to long-distance altercations.

He made that plain today when he declined to continue arguing with William Allen White, Kansas editor, who attacked the legislative record of the democratic nominee.

Furthermore, Smith announced a policy of reticence on campaign issues and tactics.

Under the circumstances, Smith is said to be looking to his supporters to answer White's counter reply, in which the Kansan was reported to have maintained that the New York governor had not refuted specific charges, and called Smith the prophet of Tammany.

Smith has not yet given studious consideration to his acceptance address, according to close friends, who say he has not yet begun its draft. Even its date is undetermined, although it has been decided to hold the notification ceremony at Albany, some time after Hoover's notification in Palo Alto, California.

DEMONSTRATION OF FRIENDSHIP FOR CARRANZA

New York, July 16.—(U.P.)—When the body of Captain Emilio Carranza starts on its trip to Mexico City Wednesday, one of the greatest demonstrations of friendship and sympathy in the history of the two neighboring republics will be witnessed.

While the body of Mexico's goal will be laid in state in a little flower-banked chapel on upper Broadway, officials were completing plans for the funeral.

One of the greatest military and funeral corteges and ceremonials that New York city has ever seen will escort the body to the Pennsylvania station Wednesday.

NORTH DAKOTA STATE FAIR OPENS

Grand Forks, N. D., July 16.—(U.P.)—The North Dakota state fair opened for a six day celebration here today the annual exhibits and contests which are expected to attract 100,000 visitors from this state, Minnesota and Manitoba.

While the opening day was devoted to no special event, editors of publications in the Red River valley were guests of the management.

Tomorrow has been dedicated to the Scandinavians; Wednesday to the famous Princess Pat band of Winnipeg; Thursday, Dominion day; Friday, North Dakota day, and Saturday, automobile day.

WATCHED GIRLS WHO DISCARDED BATHING SUITS

Budapest, Hungary, July 16.—(U.P.)—Angry housewives, whose husbands were neglecting their meals to watch girl swimmers from windows of houses near a local swimming pool, caused policemen to raid the pool and force the girls to don bathing suits, discarded because of the terrific heat.

Gov. Christianson Welcomes Kappa Alpha Theta Fraternity to State of Minnesota

BEAUTIFUL NIKE CEREMONY GIVEN SUNDAY EVENING

PURPOSE OF FRATERNITY WAS EXEMPLIFIED IN THIS SERVICE

DELEGATES RECEIVE INSTRUCTIONS FROM HEAD MARSHAL CLARA FANNING

Breezy Point, Minn., July 16.—Governor Theodore Christianson has welcomed the Kappa Alpha Theta fraternity to this state. The governor said:

"Minnesota is particularly glad to greet the members of Kappa Alpha Theta in convention here this week. Believing as you do in the high privileges of American womanhood, working as you are for brilliant achievement in scholastic fields and for a continuance of lofty ideals in community life, it is my pleasure to welcome you to a period of recreation and profit in our beautiful state."

The opening note of the six-day convention at Breezy Point Lodge was the impressive and beautiful Nike service which took place at 9 o'clock last night. The purpose of fraternity was exemplified in this service.

Delegates received their instructions from Clara Fanning, head marshal. The service introduced the beautiful convention hall to delegates and visiting Thetas in a manner that should be remembered.

Margaret K. Banta, president of District 10, gave this warm welcome: "District Ten is at present in a state of thrills over the distinction of being hostess to the national convention."

"The past two years have been years of real advancement. The chapters have exhibited splendid cooperation with their district president and I find an unusual readiness among the various officers to accept suggestions and to carry them out."

"Financially, the chapters are on a very sound basis. From a standpoint of scholarship we have one first place and one third. The alumnae chapters have worked enthusiastically and have furnished very efficient advisory boards. One of the best boards in the district is taken from a small alumnae club."

One of the most interesting features of the convention will be the exhibition of etchings which Maude Plowman is bringing to Breezy Point. These represent the work of her husband, George T. Plowman. Mrs. Plowman will address the convention Tuesday morning on "The Place of Appreciation of Art in the Life of College Women."

The slogan of LaBelle M. Stephens is to make this a singing convention. Mrs. Stephens will direct the singing as she did at the San Francisco gathering and it is expected that

HERBERT HOOVER HAS 'DOUBLE' LIKE A MOVIE STAR

Superior, Wis., July 16.—(U.P.)—Herbert Hoover has a "double"—like famous movie stars.

George Akerson, former Minneapolis newspaperman and now secretary to the candidate, resembles him so closely in facial and physical features that he unwittingly has fooled all the crowds which have gathered around the Hoover special train.

Akerson usually appears first on the back platform and the spectators burst into applause. When Hoover comes out later persons in the crowd sometimes are heard to remark, "Gee, they're twins."

Akerson formerly was Washington correspondent of the Minneapolis Journal and has been political adviser to Hoover for the last year.

Theta enthusiasm will make the echoes ring over Big Pelican lake waters these summer evenings.

Monday morning, at Edgewater convention hall, the opening ceremonies will be followed by the reception of new chapters, recognition of alumnae club delegates and state chairmen; Mrs. George Banta will give the welcoming address and Mrs. Harry S. Moore the response. The grand president, Mrs. Hal Lebrecht, will give her address, followed by reports of officers and committees.

Simultaneous councils will be held in the afternoon including grand council and college delegates of alumnae chapters and clubs in college chapter towns and those not in college towns.

At 7 P. M. comes the district dinners, followed at 8 P. M. by an hour of convention and at 9 P. M. by the model initiation.

GENERAL SANDINO HAS ORGANIZED A WOMEN'S BATTALION

Barnaquilla, Colombia, July 16.—(U.P.)—General Sandino, Nicaraguan revolutionist leader, has organized a women's battalion to aid him in his fight against the government and United States marines. Gen. Jose Cesar Rivas said in an interview in the newspaper La Nacion today.

The women, Gen. Rivas said, already had done "heroic service" in battle. They were quartered at Campo Bonanza, he said.

TWO BOYS ARE BURNED TO DEATH

Springfield, Mass., July 16.—(U.P.)—Two boys were burned to death and their parents injured today when fire, starting from an oil lamp, destroyed a dwelling on the outskirts of this city.

The dead are Harry Starkey, 9, and his brother, Everett, 7.

YOUTHFUL BANDIT WAS SHOT AND KILLED IN HOLDUP

RESTAURANT PROPRIETOR OF MINNEAPOLIS FIRST STUNS HIM WITH GLASS

DODGES SECOND MAN'S GUN AND RUNS AND SHOTS HIM

Minneapolis, July 16.—(U.P.)—An unidentified youthful bandit was shot and killed here early today during a holdup by a negro restaurant proprietor after he had been stunned by a water glass hurled by the proprietor's partner.

Posing as a customer, the youth and a companion held up and robbed Watson J. Grimes and Robert Montague, the restaurant owners, of $40. When the bandits attempted to rob several patrons Montague hurled the water glass at one of the men which knocked him unconscious.

Grimes, ignoring the second bandit's gun, ran into the kitchen, procured a revolver, returned and shot the stunned man in the head.

The negro then turned his revolver fire on the slain man's companion, who with Grimes in pursuit, fled up the street.

Father of Mrs. Hoover Weakening Gradually

Placerville, Calif., July 16.—(U.P.)—C. D. Henry, father of Mrs. Herbert Hoover, was reported weakening gradually today at a Placerville sanitarium where he has been under treatment for two weeks.

He was brought here after a heart attack. Paralysis later developed. Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford university, was here yesterday to consult with physicians in charge of the case.

AIRPLANE NOSE-DIVES INTO LAKE WATERS

Detroit, Mich., July 16.—(U.P.)—An airplane nose-dived into the water of Lake St. Clair, near Grosse Pointe on the American shore, today.

It was reported that one man was killed. The plane was located in the water, but its identity was not determined immediately.

REP. H. R. RATHBONE DIES AFTER OPERATION

Chicago, July 16.—(U.P.)—Rep. Henry R. Rathbone, congressman-at-large from Illinois, died here yesterday after an operation.

Rathbone, a staunch prohibitionist and advocate of farm relief, had been ill for two years and entered the hospital several days ago.

HEAT WAVE STILL HAS MOST OF EUROPE IN GRIP

London, July 16.—(U.P.)—The heat wave that has gripped Europe for the past week continued today with numerous reports of fatalities reaching London.

Fourteen persons were drowned throughout England. Four persons died of the heat in England.

Fifty persons were treated, after prostrations, in Paris.

6TH DISTRICT LEGION IN CONVENTION

TWO DAYS SESSION OPENED TODAY AT SAUK CENTRE

ENTERTAINMENT PROGRAM INCLUDES OUTDOOR SPORTS AND SPEAKING

Sauk Centre, Minn., July 16.—(U.P.)—Members of the sixth district American Legion and Auxiliary gathered here today for their annual two-day convention.

Entertainment programs including outdoor sports and speaking were formulated. The first business session of both organizations was slated for late today.

Officers of the Legion in attendance include L. E. Zumwinkle, Ferguson Falls, and C. C. Neldig, Aitkin, department commanders. Michael Murray, St. Cloud, past district commander, was also expected to attend.

Among the auxiliary women expected to attend were Mrs. J. H. Bishop, Thief River Falls; Mrs. J. A. Forrester, St. Cloud; and Mrs. A. C. Carlson, Willmar.

CHARLES HOPPE IS SENTENCED TO DEATH BY ELECTROCUTION

Toledo, Ohio, July 16.—(U.P.)—Charles Hoppe, former Toledo chauffeur who kidnapped and murdered 7-year-old Dorothy Szelagowski several weeks ago, today was sentenced to death by electrocution.

October 26 was set as the date of execution.

Hoppe went on trial three weeks ago. When the trial was nearing its last stages, the man suddenly decided to plead guilty and throw himself upon the mercy of the court.

Dry Administrators to Study Prohibition

Washington, July 16.—(U.P.)—Prohibition Commissioner Doran today appointed a committee of dry administrators to study the prohibition situation in territory bordering inland rivers of the United States.

The committee will determine whether prohibition enforcement along inland rivers can be handled with the present force or whether it is necessary to create a special force, Doran said.

CHARGE SALE OF PUBLIC OFFICES

Biloxi, Miss., July 16.—(U.P.)—An indictment charging sale of public offices in Mississippi has been returned against Perry W. Howard, national negro republican committeeman, by the federal grand jury here, it became known today.

ARRESTED FOR ILLEGAL RELIGIOUS SERVICES HELD

Mexico City, July 16.—(U.P.)—Twenty-one persons, including 19 women, were arrested Sunday for attending illegal religious services.

EARTHQUAKE IN TURKEY DESTROYS TOWN OF TORBALI

Constantinople, July 16.—(U.P.)—An earthquake today destroyed the town of Torballi. Six persons were injured, including the governor. Four persons were injured in a quake at Smyrna.

BRINGS TO A CLIMAX GREAT WORK OF RESCUE

SAVES AVIATOR CHUKHNOVSKY AND HIS FOUR COMPANIONS

PICKS UP NORWEGIAN HUNTS- MAN NOYES AND THREE CHASSEURS

Moscow, July 16.—(U.P.)—After bringing to a climax today, with the rescue of nine men, the most triumphant voyage in polar history, the Russian ice breaker Krassin steamed through the Arctic ice for Advent Bay to recoup and resume her rescue work.

The Krassin embarked at 10 P. M. yesterday, her aviator, Chukhnovsky, his four companions who had crashed with him last week on the ice in a rescue flight, and the Norwegian huntsman, Noyes, and three Italian Alpine Chasseurs who had been in search of survivors of the Italia disaster.

These eight men joined the seven survivors of the Italia who had been embarked last week—two of them from a small ice floe and five from the ice camp off Foyn Island.

The Italia survivors are under physicians' care, but they, who had given themselves up as sure to die, are even more jubilant than the Krassin's complement, and there is constant rejoicing aboard the ship.

The Krassin, with Chukhnovsky's damaged plane in tow, will make for Advent Bay to recoup and proceed to search for the six men carried away with the dirigible's gas bag and for Roald Amundsen, discoverer of the south pole, and the five men who disappeared with him in a French seaplane.

These men are the only ones missing. There was an unconfirmed report that Amundsen and two companions were picked up by the Russian icebreaker Malmgren. Nothing more has been heard of this report, which it was pointed out when it was circulated was from a garbled message, and the report is regarded as incorrect.

(By United Press)

With the rescue today by the Russian icebreaker Krassin of Aviator Chukhnovsky and his companions, there remained 12 persons missing of those involved in the wreck of the dirigible Italia as victims or rescuers.

Six of those missing were men of the Italia crew, carried away with the wrecked airship's gas bag; the other six were rescuers who disappeared in a French seaplane. One of them was Roald Amundsen, discoverer of the south pole.

Aboard the Krassin besides Chukhnovsky and his four companions were a dog sled party of four, picked up with him, and seven members of the Italia crew. Gen. Umberto Nobile, the Italia's commander, was rescued by airplane weeks ago. The remaining two of the Italia's crew were Vincenzo Pomella and Prof. Finn Malmgren.

Pomella was killed when the Italia crashed. Malmgren was left by two Italian companions to die on the ice.

Some rescuers had met disaster themselves and were rescued in turn. Lieut. Einar-Paál Lundborg, who rescued Gen. Umberto Nobile from the Italia ice camp, crashed himself on a later flight and was brought out by his bosom friend, Lieut. Birger Schyberg. Capt. Sora and Sjeff Van Dongen, who took a dogged team to search for the Italia survivors, were rescued by Sergt. V. Milsen, a Swede like Malmgren, Schyberg and Lundborg. Dr. Ludvig Varming, Norwegian, who had accompanied Sora and Van Dongen, is awaiting rescue in a trapper's hut, where he stayed because of a slight illness.

DIES FROM POISON TAKEN AFTER QUARREL WITH HER SUITOR

St. Paul, July 16.—(U.P.)—Dorothy Hammer, 20, Lake Elmo, Minn., died in a hospital here early today as a result of poison taken after a quarrel with her suitor.

Relatives of the girl brought her here late Sunday when they found she had taken the poison when she rushed into her home, leaving the young man outside.

A coroner's investigation into the death was started today.

This is how the demolished plane of Capt. Emilio Carranza, "Mexican Lindy," appeared shortly after the crash at Mount Holly, N. J., in which the brave airman met his death. It is thought that the plane was struck by lightning.

CHARLES HOPPE IS SENTENCED TO DEATH BY ELECTROCUTION

Toledo, Ohio, July 16.—(U.P.)—Charles Hoppe, former Toledo chauffeur who kidnapped and murdered 7-year-old Dorothy Szelagowski several weeks ago, today was sentenced to death by electrocution.

October 26 was set as the date of execution.

Hoppe went on trial three weeks ago. When the trial was nearing its last stages, the man suddenly decided to plead guilty and throw himself upon the mercy of the court.

Dry Administrators to Study Prohibition

Washington, July 16.—(U.P.)—Prohibition Commissioner Doran today appointed a committee of dry administrators to study the prohibition situation in territory bordering inland rivers of the United States.

The committee will determine whether prohibition enforcement along inland rivers can be handled with the present force or whether it is necessary to create a special force, Doran said.

BRINGS TO A CLIMAX GREAT WORK OF RESCUE

SAVES AVIATOR CHUKHNOVSKY AND HIS FOUR COMPANIONS

PICKS UP NORWEGIAN HUNTS-MAN NOYES AND THREE CHASSEURS

Moscow, July 16.—(U.P.)—After bringing to a climax today, the rescue of nine men, the most triumphant voyage in polar history, the Russian ice breaker Krassin steamed through the Arctic ice for Advent Bay to recoup and resume her rescue work.

The Krassin embarked at 10 P. M. yesterday, her aviator, Chukhnovsky, his four companions who had crashed with him last week on the ice in a rescue flight, and the Norwegian huntsman, Noyes, and three Italian Alpine Chasseurs who had been in search of survivors of the Italia disaster.

These eight men joined the seven survivors of the Italia who had been embarked last week—two of them from a small ice floe and five from the ice camp off Foy Island.

The Italia survivors are under physicians' care, but they, who had given themselves up as sure to die, are even more jubilant than the Krassin's complement, and there is constant rejoicing aboard the ship.

The Krassin, with Chukhnovsky's damaged plane in tow, will make for Advent Bay to recoup and proceed to search for the six men carried away with the dirigible's gas bag and for Roald Amundsen, discoverer of the south pole, and the five men who disappeared with him in a French seaplane.

These men are the only ones missing. There was an unconfirmed report that Amundsen and two companions were picked up by the Russian icebreaker Malign. Nothing more has been heard of this report, which it was pointed out when it was circulated was from a garbled message, and the report is regarded as incorrect.

(By United Press)

With the rescue today by the Russian icebreaker Krassin of Aviator Chukhnovsky and his companions, there remained 12 persons missing of those involved in the wreck of the dirigible Italia as victims or rescuers.

Six of those missing were men of the Italia crew, carried away with the wrecked airship's gas bag; the other six were rescuers who disappeared in a French seaplane. One of them was Roald Amundsen, discoverer of the south pole.

Aboard the Krassin besides Chukhnovsky and his four companions were a dog sled party of four, picked up with him, and seven members of the Italia crew. Gen. Umberto Nobile, the Italia's commander, was rescued by airplane weeks ago. The remaining two of the Italia's crew were Vinezio Pomella and Prof. Flinn Malmgren.

Pomella was killed when the Italia crashed. Malmgren was left by two Italian companions to die on the ice.

Some rescuers had met disaster themselves and were rescued in turn. Lieut. Einar-Paul Lundberg, who rescued Gen. Umberto Nobile from the Italia ice camp, crashed himself on a later flight and was brought out by his bosom friend, Lieut. Birger Schyberg. Capt. Sora and Sjet Van Dongen, who took a dog sled team to search for the Italia survivors, were rescued by Sergt. V. Milson, a Swede like Malmgren, Schyberg and Lundberg. Dr. Ludvig Varming, Norwegian, who had accompanied Sora and Van Dongen, is awaiting rescue in a trapper's hut, where he stayed because of a slight illness.

DIES FROM POISON TAKEN AFTER QUARREL WITH HER SUITOR

St. Paul, July 16.—(U.P.)—Dorothy Hammer, 20, Lake Elmo, Minn., died in a hospital here early today as a result of poison taken after a quarrel with her suitor.

Relatives of the girl brought her here late Sunday when they found she had taken the poison when she rushed into her home, leaving the young man outside.

A coroner's investigation into the death was started today.

This is how the demolished plane of Capt. Emilio Carranza, Mexican "Lindy," appeared shortly after the crash at Mount Holly, N. J., in which the brave aviator met his death. It is thought that the plane was struck by lightning.

BRAINERD
25 YEARS AGO

From the Daily Dispatch

July 16, 1903

Mrs. Harry Brooks gave a porch party yesterday afternoon at her home on the north side in honor of Miss Alice Davis, who is visiting in the city. Covers were laid for eight.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Polk expected a return from Washington state tomorrow. Mr. Polk has been in the newspaper business on the coast but has decided, it is understood, to return to Brainerd and practice law again with his father.

The Antlers hotel property, recently purchased by Adam Armstrong, was turned over to him today, Woodin & Co. retiring. Mr. Armstrong will at once commence work on a complete rearrangement of the interior and he expects to have one of the very best hostleries in the city.

Mrs. Jerry Flickwir entertained a number of ladies at her home on the north side this afternoon in honor of Mrs. S. L. Bean, who is soon to move to her new home in New Mexico. A specially prepared musical program was rendered. Refreshments were served.

Young Pat Boyle is guiding the destinies of the Brainerd regular team now. He has scheduled two of the three games with Little Falls, Staples and Verndale. Little Falls will play here Sunday.

DeMolay Chapter

The DeMolay chapter will hold a meeting this evening in the Masonic hall at 8 o'clock. All members are requested to be present.

Minor Scales

Melodic is so named because it is better suited for melodic purposes, as it has no augmented interval to sing or play. The harmonic is so-called because it is the basis of the chords used in the minor key.

MINNEAPOLIS GIRL HURT

Madeline Leyman, 6, Receives Minor Injuries in Car Mishap This Afternoon

Madeline Leyman, six-year-old Minneapolis girl, received bruises this afternoon at 4:15 o'clock when struck by a car on South Sixth st. She was taken to the Brainerd Clinic where her injuries were reported as not serious.

The father of the girl is Charles A. Leyman, Minneapolis policeman. The driver of the car which struck the girl is John Heimiller of Route 6, Brainerd. The father claims he lifted a wheel from the child as she lay under the car.

Old Belief Shattered

Experiments made at the University of California have proved that a bull's reaction to the color of red is no more than to any other color. In fact, judging by the conduct of the steers tested, it seems doubtful whether they can tell red from green, or white from blue. It is even possible that the animals have no realization of color at all.

Silk for Consistent Hindus

Muga silk is a product of Assam. Eri silk comes from caterpillars which feed on the castor oil plant. It is of great value in India, because it is the only silk that can be spun from cocoons without killing the insects in the cocoons, and it is therefore the only silk that can be worn by a strict Hindoo.

Poor Time Ahead

Mother was going to take Billy visiting with her, so while dressing him she said: "You must be good today, exceptionally good, because Aunt Hattie is going to be there and she doesn't like noisy boys." "O, gee," said the youngster, "I see where I'm going to have a rotten time."

Sails Long in Use

On a painted Greek vase of about 800 B. C. there is a ship represented with a sail, a single passenger and a helmsman. The pictures on coins of Phoenician ships are cruder than might be expected in view of the great reputation that people had as sailors. But the ships of Tarshish made many a successful trip to Britain and Spain for tin and other metals.

Washes with hand carefulness

A LAUNDERING process which is too harsh for your dainty garments is also hard on coarse clothes. The coarse clothes may not show the abuse as quickly, but their life is shortened nevertheless.

The Maytag washes dainty lingerie or coarse grimy work-clothes equally well. The clothes are cleaned by the action of hot, soapy water in a satin-smooth, cast-aluminum tub. It is gentle, but thorough—even the stubborn edge-dirt of collars and cuffs is washed out without hand-rubbing. A big tubful is washed clean in 2 to 7 minutes, an average washing in an hour.

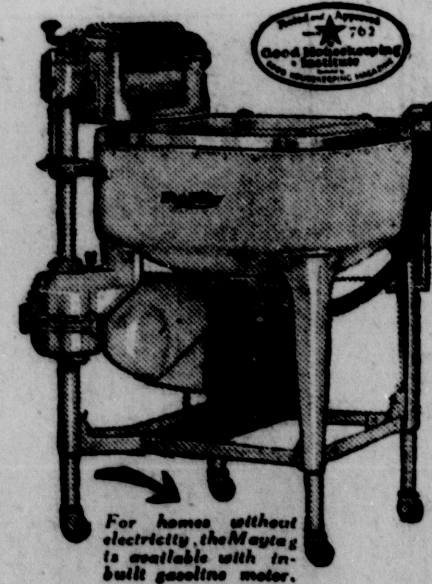

The Roller Water Remover removes both soap and water evenly from all parts of the garment. The large soft top roll working against a hard bottom roll does not harm buttons and buttons do not bite into the rolls. It has a Safety Feed, the drain-board reverses itself, and the tension adjusts itself.

Phone for Free Washing

Experience the joy of a Maytag wash-hour, the handiest, fastest, most thorough washer—the washer that won world leadership. Test it, compare it in your own home. If it doesn't sell itself, don't keep it.

BRAINERD
25 YEARS AGO

From the Daily Dispatch

July 16, 1903

Mrs. Harry Brooks gave a porch party yesterday afternoon at her home on the north side in honor of Miss Alice Davis, who is visiting in the city. Covers were laid for eight.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Polk expected a return from Washington state tomorrow. Mr. Polk has been in the newspaper business on the coast but has decided, it is understood, to return to Brainerd and practice law again with his father.

The Antlers hotel property, recently purchased by Adam Armstrong, was turned over to him today, Woodin & Co. retiring. Mr. Armstrong will at once commence work on a complete rearrangement of the interior and he expects to have one of the very best hostleries in the city.

Mrs. Jerry Flickwir entertained a number of ladies at her home on the north side this afternoon in honor of Mrs. S. L. Bean, who is soon to move to her new home in New Mexico. A specially prepared musical program was rendered. Refreshments were served.

Young Pat Boyle is guiding the destinies of the Brainerd regular team now. He has scheduled two of the three games with Little Falls, Staples and Verdale. Little Falls will play here Sunday.

DeMolay Chapter

The DeMolay chapter will hold a meeting this evening in the Masonic hall at 8 o'clock. All members are requested to be present.

LEASES PAVILION

Thomas Walsh Now Managing the West Pavilion at Birchdale, Dance on Wednesday
Thomas Walsh has taken over the West pavilion at Birchdale eight miles from town and will give a dance on Wednesday night, with Lou's band playing.

Minor Scales

Melodic is so named because it is better suited for melodic purposes, as it has no augmented interval to sing or play. The harmonic is so-called because it is the basis of the chords used in the minor key.

MINNEAPOLIS GIRL HURT

Madeline Leyman, 6, Receives Minor Injuries in Car Mishap This Afternoon

Madeline Leyman, six-year-old Minneapolis girl, received bruises this afternoon at 4:15 o'clock when struck by a car on South Sixth st. She was taken to the Brainerd Clinic where her injuries were reported as not serious.

The father of the girl is Charles A. Leyman, Minneapolis policeman. The driver of the car which struck the girl is John Heinmiller of Route 6, Brainerd. The father claims he lifted a wheel from the child as she lay under the car.

Old Belief Shattered

Experiments made at the University of California have proved that a bull's reaction to the color of red is no more than to any other color. In fact, judging by the conduct of the steers tested, it seems doubtful whether they can tell red from green, or white from blue. It is even possible that the animals have no realization of color at all.

Silk for Consistent Hindus

Muga silk is a product of Assam. Eri silk comes from caterpillars which feed on the castor oil plant. It is of great value in India, because it is the only silk that can be spun from cocoons without killing the insects in the cocoons, and it is therefore the only silk that can be worn by a strict Hindoo.

Poor Time Ahead

Mother was going to take Billy visiting with her, so while dressing him she said: "You must be good today, exceptionally good, because Aunt Hattie is going to be there and she doesn't like noisy boys." "O, gee," said the youngster, "I see where I'm going to have a rotten time."

Sails Long in Use

On a painted Greek vase of about 600 B. C. there is a ship represented with a sail, a single passenger and a helmsman. The pictures on coins of Phoenician ships are cruder than might be expected in view of the great reputation that people had as sailors. But the ships of Tarshish made many a successful trip to Britain and Spain for tin and other metals.

WILL DIG UP OLD FORT OF MEXICO

Scientist Plans to Excavate Monte Alban.

Mexico City.—A party of investigators, headed by Alfonso Caso, archeologist, and Miguel D. de Mendizábal, ethnologist, representing the Mexican Historical Review, will begin a study, before the end of the current year, of the ancient fortified mountain city known as Monte Alban near the city of Oaxaca.

Monte Alban is part of the relics of strange prehistoric builders who modified entire mountain skylines by carving terraces and erecting pyramids until they looked like sculptures on a petticoat.

Practically nothing is known of the race that conceived the unique notion of leaving its mark notched on the upland horizon, and the archeological city was old and deserted when the Spanish came to subdue Oaxaca along with the rest of Mexico.

Looks Like Work of Moles.

Today, swathed in its age-old padding of earth and vegetation, the site of Monte Alban, seen from its highest point, suggests the work of giant moles which burrowed and upheaved on a geometrical plan. The city whose angles are now curves, whose square pyramids are grassy mounds, and whose sunken terrace gardens are dunes in the earth, looks down upon modern green, and white, and pink Oaxaca, nestled in the sunny valley 1,000 feet below and five kilometers away.

The ridges are leveled off at different heights, and a series of mounds and terraces result that are as confusing in their number and extent as the layout of a large city. The mounds were flat-topped pyramids on which superstructures once stood, as stumps of walls sticking out of the covering of grass still show, and there are many remains of fortifying walls, forming battlements for terraces that overlooked the approaches to the mountain city.

There are series of sunken rectangular terraces surrounded by ancient structures raised on sloping sides that give the quadrangles the appearance of modern football fields with the grandstands all around. Piles of stone and weed-smothered earth left in the centers of these inclosures suggest that they were altars.

No systematic excavations have been made in Monte Alban, but the evidence of occasional haphazard ones is significant. A pyramid structure that has been probed by a series of tunnels in a search for hidden treasure reveals that it is built up of seven artificial levels of broken stone filled with earth and capped by pavements of lime concrete.

The recent earthquake which shook all Mexico brought down some of the rock, filling parts of these tunnels.

In the sides of several terraces or mounds there are ancient sepulchres that have been sacked, but the corbelled stone-lined vaults remain, showing their great similarity to Maya architecture farther south. Narrow entrances leading to the tombs are picture galleries lined with stone slabs carved with human figures that perhaps represented persons who were buried there in ancient times.

Dispute Over Ownership.

Some people in the region claim that Monte Alban was the fortified borderland between the land of the Zapotecs, who built the ancient city of Mitla, some seventy kilometers away, and the Mixtecs, to whom Monte Alban is ascribed, especially by modern Mixtecs living in the villages below. On the other hand, modern Zapotecs claim Monte Alban as theirs.

Mitla and Monte Alban, although very close together, are radically apart in style and perhaps in the time of their building. Mitla is one of the few archeological cities known in middle America that is not built on a series of pyramids as substructures, and there is only one true pyramid on the site. Mitla's most striking feature is the geometrical mosaics of stone that make up its wall panels and friezes, which show a Mexican or northern influence.

Monte Alban, on the other hand, is built entirely on pyramids and terraces, and shows in its corbelled funeral vaults and carved stones a strong Maya influence.

Dr. Manuel Gamio, leading Mexican scientist, believes it possible that Monte Alban may even have been a young Maya city during one of the early steps in the evolution of that race, or may at least be an important link in its history. There seems no doubt that the enormous amount of information there is ready to tap in the many well-known but unexplored archeological sites of Mexico will some day clear up many points in American prehistory.

Greeks Fight Locusts With Cannibal Kib

Washington.—Big predatory locusts that prey on their fellow insects instead of on growing grain crops, are being tried out in Greece as one means of combating the pest of ordinary locusts now threatening the fields, according to word received here from Athens.

These modern descendants of one of the plagues of Egypt have been causing serious losses to Greek agriculture during the last few years and the ministry of agriculture is preparing to spend 100,000 drachmas (approximately $25,000,000) in a campaign against them.

The Locked Door

By MARTHA WILLIAMS

(Copyright.)

"YOU'RE not going a step. With your jaw swelled till you look like that heather. I'd like to see you all worship, everybody would laugh at you and wonder why in creation I let you come," Mrs. Neal said, her tone less unkind than her words.

She was not fond of Amabel, her stepdaughter but conscientious in duty toward the girl. Amabel was so like her mother, who had carried off the only man her successor had ever fancied, it was not hard to hate her—still the two kept terms decently.

Mainly, he it said, through Amabel's yieldings to authority, she had never thought of rebellion until Austin Ware proved to her that her feet and her spirit were equally made to dance.

The proving came to pass in a visit Amabel had paid to a kinswoman at the other side of the county. Her neighborhood was gay, full of young folk, given to dancing and dining, with the approval and example of their elders. Even more than her husband, Mrs. Neal loved her church and her dominion in it. Tonight she would queen it at the annual supper.

"Your pa is so deaf he wouldn't go anyway," she said to Amabel as she set her bonnet in place. "So nobody can say a word about staying away—a jaw like that is enough for anything. Go to bed early. I'll fetch you some little cheesecakes if any happen to be left."

"Don't trouble," Amabel mumbled. "I can't sit—good night. Maybe I can sleep—but I don't feel like it—now."

That much at least was truth. Behind a locked door she flung off sober garments, freed her cheek of a huge wedge of chewing gum, nodded to it saucily.

Stealthily, noiselessly, she slipped into a giddy, airy scarlet frock. It showed beautifully sheer silk stockings matching its hue, red satin slippers with brilliant paste buckles. She had left the outer door unlocked—as she heard it carefully opened she slid down the stairs, her long black wrap huddled over her arm, her carriage boots swinging in her hand, to meet Austin, who after a suppressed whistle, flung the wrap about her, saying in her ear:

"Mme. Mephisto—I shan't dare to let you out of my sight—not tonight—nor ever," the last words underbreath.

It was bitter cold, the road hard frozen yet beaten smooth as grass. The motor burred over it at lightning speed. Amabel had no sense of time or distance. It seemed to her hardly a minute before she found herself in a warm, brilliantly lighted room, part of a gay, surging crowd simply dance-mad. Something in the air set spirits on edge. She was ready—reckless enough to brave anything.

So it was with Austin who at last hurried her away, saying, "One o'clock, Cinderella, but you shall have more dances."

They glided stealthily up to the Neal gate. Amabel forbade a nearer approach. "Go away, I can get in best by myself," she said. Austin only smiled. He drew her hand within his arm and half carried her up the slippery brick pavement that ran the length of the lawn. He even lifted her into the tiny porch and there pulled away her wrap. "I want to remember you always just as you look now," he said, standing back a pace or so to see more clearly. His headlights illumined the space with a soft, suffused radiance. It etherialized Amabel. He tried to fling his arms about her, but the door opened wide and Mrs. Neal, candle in hand, stood framed in it.

"This must be a—mistake," she said with a hard breath. "Ours is a respectable house—it does not harbor scarlet women. I should hate to disturb my sleeping husband—so please go away—at once," turning at the last word to shut and lock the door.

A shut door was the only proper answer to such trickery, thought Mrs. Neal. She would open it after awhile—when Amabel, reduced to abject fear, should make proper supplication.

Up in her own room she waited tensely for the knocking that would tell her she had won. It did not come. Instead, she heard the motor moving rapidly away. She would go down and listen closely—maybe Amabel was outside the door, trembling with cold, afraid to knock.

She opened the door. Nothing, nobody. Heedless of her bare head she ran to the gate, then began a hurried search of the thick shrubbery, the summer house, the garage.

Shaking like a leaf, she crept back within, tried to rouse her husband, but vainly; he was one of the seven sleepers. Then she thought of the minister. He was always a safe counselor. And she was afraid for Amabel's safety out there in the bitter cold. "That you, Sister Neal?" came a hearty answer at last. "You're just in time to be too late. I married your runaways hard and fast ten minutes ago, and I'm bound to say they took the happiest pair I have ever helped into double harness."

The good man stopped suddenly. Over the wire he heard unmistakable sobbing, then faintly: "Oh, thank the Lord for this crowning mercy. But for it I might be a murderess."

The minister never asked explanations, but he gave out to the world that Sister Neal had a mighty soft heart, and was, in spite of appearances, wrapped up in her stepchild.

He drew her hand within his arm and half carried her up the slippery brick pavement that ran the length of the lawn. He even lifted her into the tiny porch and there pulled away her wrap. "I want to remember you always just as you look now," he said, standing back a pace or so to see more clearly. His headlights illumined the space with a soft, suffused radiance. It etherealized Amabel. He tried to fling his arms about her, but the door opened wide and Mrs. Neal, candle in hand, stood framed in it.

"This must be a—mistake," she said with a hard breath. "Ours is a respectable house—it does not harbor scarlet women. I should hate to disturb my sleeping husband—so please go away—at once," turning at the last word to shut and lock the door.

A shut door was the only proper answer to such trickery, thought Mrs. Neal. She would open it after awhile—when Amabel, reduced to abject fear, should make proper supplication.

Up in her own room she waited tensely for the knocking that would tell her she had won. It did not come. Instead, she heard the motor moving rapidly away. She would go down and listen closely—maybe Amabel was outside the door, trembling with cold, afraid to knock.

She opened the door. Nothing, nobody. Heedless of her bare head she ran to the gate, then began a hurried search of the thick shrubbery, the summer house, the garage.

Shaking like a leaf, she crept back within, tried to rouse her husband, but vainly; he was one of the seven sleepers. Then she thought of the minister. He was always a safe counselor. And she was afraid for Amabel's safety out there in the bitter cold.

"That you, Sister Neal?" came a hearty answer at last. "You're just in time to be too late. I married your runaway husband and fast ten minutes ago, and I'm bound to say they took the happiest pair I have ever helped into double harness."

The good man stopped suddenly. Over the wire he heard unmistakable sobbing, then faintly: "Oh, thank the Lord for this crowning mercy. But for it I might be a murderer."

The minister never asked explanations, but he gave out to the world that Sister Neal had a mighty soft heart, and was, in spite of appearances, wrapped up in her stepchild.

NORTHWEST HEADED FOR A GOOD CROP

THE Northwest is headed for a good crop, John W. Haw, Director of the Department of Agricultural Development of the Northern Pacific, said following a trip of inspection over the lines of that railroad.

Mr. Haw said that crop-stimulating weather in the last month has resulted in sharp improvement in agricultural conditions.

"Small grain and forage crop conditions in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Montana today testify to the wonderful recuperative powers of nature and how far afield one can go in making crop estimates early in the season," Mr. Haw said. "On June 15, the most optimistic observers were predicting a crop ranging from poor to fair and considerably below the 10 year average. But in the last half of June and the first two weeks in July intermittent rains in generous amounts watered all of the country from the Rocky Mountains to the Great Lakes. Cool, cloudy weather prevailed over the entire area and every form of vegetative life came forward by leaps and bounds.

"Today any casual observer can see that the Northwest is headed for a good crop. A fair crop in some regions, an excellent crop in others, but generally speaking a good crop—up to average or better given fair weather conditions in the remainder of July and early August. This year's crop cannot be of bumper proportions, maximum yields were shut out by the late May and early June drouth and close examinations in grain fields from central Montana east disclose a rather thin stand and a ragged appearance due to uneven germination.

"Rye will be a poor crop almost everywhere. "Very early sown grain will in most sections produce disappointing yields. That sown somewhat later looks good and late seeded coarse grains and flax present great promise, but will be subjected to the usual weather vicissitudes of late summer and the final outcome is now a matter of pure conjecture.

"Speaking in very general terms, conditions in western and central Montana are good to excellent, eastern Montana and North and South Dakota fair to good, central North Dakota very good, northeastern North Dakota excellent, southeastern North Dakota fair, Minnesota good and South Dakota poor to fair. It is doubtful if the Northwest spring wheat crop equals last year's total, but with reasonable freedom from rust and hot weather damage the crop should be well above average.

"There is promise of plenty of hay and forage crops for wintering livestock in most sections and with pastures rejuvenated by recent rains the outlook for carrying livestock is favorable."

THE BUSY ROADS

MANY bewail the fact that endless processions of motor cars now cover the "open road," meaning by that the main highways, says the Monroe, Michigan, Evening News. That is true, and it can't be helped. In fact that is just what makes these roads main highways, the fact that traffic gravitates to them. They certainly carry an enormous traffic during busy hours—too much for pleasure, and sometimes too much for safety.

But the case is not so bad, after all. The complaints come largely from two classes of drivers. One class is speeders. For these there is little to suggest except that traffic is lightest after midnight and that motors run better on night air. The other class is those who like to saunter along, slowing up traffic and annoying everybody. These might be reminded that the open road still exists—the by-road on which one may ramble at a 12-mile gait without bothering anybody.

Of course we like to have beauty, interest, safety and comfort all combined with smooth concrete and a bee-line. But it can't be done. Certain roads are naturally business thoroughfares, where drivers go whose main purpose is to get somewhere as directly as possible, or to haul something as easily as possible. Trunk line roads exist for that kind of traffic. It makes them, and they make it. On such roads we should be content to join the parade and travel at something like its average speed. If we dawdle we are a nuisance; if we keep shooting ahead of everybody we invite trouble. Leisurely pleasure driving on such roads, except during the more quiet hours, is out of the question.

But there are other roads, many of them. There are the secondary improved roads, not so broad or direct as the state highways but excellent going. Then there are many miles of roads less highly improved but still good enough to be very comfortable driving, and many of such roads are pleasant and interesting. With modern tires and springs a little roughness now and then is nothing to be feared. For real pleasure driving at busy times, such as a Sunday or holiday afternoon, the side roads and by-roads offer an opportunity that should not be overlooked. It is the only place where one can drive and still take it easy mentally.

DEATHS BY DROWNING

EACH day twenty persons drown in the United States. Estimated fatal accidents show an annual average of 7,300 drownings for the past five years.

Only three causes of accidents claim a greater toll of life than drowning: they are automobile accidents, 24,400 annually; falls, 15,000; railroad accidents, 8,000.

In the years from 1900 to 1920, the death rate due to drowning was cut in half. Since then it has remained virtually stationary.

The automobile facilitates outdoor recreation, and all public bathing places have doubled and tripled the patronage they had formerly, so while the number of accidents remains much the same, there undoubtedly has been a great decrease in the percentage of fatalities in comparison with the number participating in water sports.

Deaths by drowning are unusually high in the early spring months, largely due to the fact that persons go swimming in water that is too cold, and in places where supervision by life saving experts has not yet begun.

The largest number of deaths by drowning occur in the age groups below 25, the greatest percentage being males between 15 and 19, and the second greatest, between 10 and 14.

The Red Cross Life Saving instruction courses emphasize not only methods of rescue and resuscitation, but also the dangers of swimming in hazardous ponds, pools and creeks where there is no supervision; in swimming alone; and in the attempted rescue of the drowning by any other than one qualified to perform a rescue.

In the resort avocation as in every other line, business comes to him who goes after it.

Uncle's Magic Flute

By OLIVE GRAY

(Copyright.)

"TURNED you down, did she?" chuckled Uncle Oliver, as he faced Dorry Lander's crestfallen countenance. "You're no match for the girls, Dorry, my lad!"

"She's not only one girl, Mr. Wylie. Marion is a dozen girls."

"One girl with the essence of a dozen, eh?" went on Marion's adoring uncle. "But I surely thought she liked you a little bit, my boy."

The young fellow turned a dark, tense face, and humorous gray eyes toward the older man, but there was a tinge of bitterness in his voice. "I'm afraid it's a little bit—a very little bit, sir."

"Fshaw, Dorry, when I was a young chap like you, we knew how to make the girls like us, whether they would or no," blurted Mr. Wylie impatiently.

"Dorry smiled. "Yet you never married one, sir!"

"True, my boy—but, she didn't like me even a little bit. Now Marion—" he paused and rumbled his thick gray hair. "Come into the study, I want to show you something."

He crossed to the fireplace and took a long narrow box of hammered brass from the mantelpiece. "I'm going to give you a love philter," he announced.

Dorry Lander stared and then his deep, hearty laugh echoed through the house.

"You can laugh, young man, but this love philter is not exactly that—it has a wooing charm that wins the hardest heart." He opened the box and pulled out an ebony flute inlaid with mother of pearl and filigree silver. "It is a love charm."

"A charm?" repeated Dorry politely.

"Yes. It is the flute of old Ab' Yussuf, now a venerable sheik, and patriarch of his tribe in the Arabian desert. He told me wonderful stories of its power to win the love of a maiden—just play it before her—that's what he said—and believe me he must have been a handsome rascal in his youth. I took the flute—I thought I might use it some day—but deuce take it all, the only girl I had ever fancied married while I was on that trip."

Dorry took the case and thanked the donor. "I feel like a fool, Mr. Wylie. I never played a flute."

"So much the better—just blow it gently in her ear, or under her window, or—somewhere—away from the house by all means," he added emphatically.

"Oh! I'll try the rose garden by moonlight tonight," muttered Dorry, looking very red. He hid the flute in his coat pocket for he heard Marion's light step on the stairs. "Tell her I will come over tonight—but don't tell her about the flute," he whispered, and slipping over the windowsill he disappeared among the trees that led to the side street.

It was not until after ten o'clock that he re-entered the Wylie grounds and made his way to the lovely rose garden which was overlooked by the south side of the old house. Marion's window was on that side and a faint light shone there behind rosy curtains. "I wonder if she looked for me tonight," he thought as he took out the flute. Never in his life had he played any musical instrument, and it was with some trepidation that he put the flute to his lips, and following Mr. Wylie's directions he blew softly.

The result was so wonderful that he charmed his own senses and sat down on a marble seat among the roses. The most entrancing music came wandering from the flute of the old Arab sheik. It was like all the love songs of the world—it played itself as Dorry blew gently into the mouthpiece. The wooing strains from the flute seemed to kiss the bending roses, seemed to meet the falling dew, seemed to lift up to Marion's windows. He forgot her for the moment—he was entranced with love itself!

All at once he saw a misty white form coming across the lawn; it drew nearer, nearer, and the moonlight shimmered on her golden hair—it was the girl he loved. Now she hurried a little as if drawn by the melody, until she ran breathlessly into the rose garden, and poised before him, a smile on her lovely face. As he dropped the flute and jumped up she turned and buried her face in a glorious clump of roses, pressing the cool fragrant petals to her hot cheeks.

"Dearest," whispered Dorry beside her.

"Dorry," she answered in a muffled tone, "were you playing that for me?"

"Of course."

"I thought when I heard it that some one had stolen Uncle Oliver's prized possession and I came out to rescue it, and it was only you playing to the moon!"

"Confound it all," said Dorry impatiently. "I knew it wouldn't work for a cent! You're only laughing at me after all!" He picked up the flute and turned away, but from among the roses her voice came sweet and low.

"Don't go, Dorry. Uncle Oliver meant well, but you don't need the flute to win my love, because—"

And Uncle Oliver gave them the flute for a wedding present, because he said he was actually afraid of its influence in the possession of a con-

By OLIVE GRAY

(Copyright.)

"TURNED you down, did she?" chuckled Uncle Oliver, as he faced Dorry Lander's crestfallen countenance. "You're no match for the girls, Dorry, my lad!"

"She's not only one girl, Mr. Wylie. Marion is a dozen girls."

"One girl with the essence of a dozen, eh?" went on Marion's adoring uncle. "But I surely thought she liked you a little bit, my boy."

The young fellow turned a dark, tense face, and humorous gray eyes toward the older man, but there was a tinge of bitterness in his voice. "I'm afraid it's a little bit—a very little bit, sir."

"Pshaw, Dorry, when I was a young chap like you, we knew how to make the girls like us, whether they would or no," blurted Mr. Wylie impatiently.

"Dorry smiled. 'Yet you never married one, sir!'"

"True, my boy—but, she didn't like me even a little bit. Now Marion—" he paused and rumbled his thick gray hair. "Come into the study, I want to show you something."

He crossed to the fireplace and took a long narrow box of hammered brass from the mantelpiece. "I'm going to give you a love philter," he announced.

Dorry Lander stared and then his deep, hearty laugh echoed through the house.

"You can laugh, young man, but this love philter is not exactly that—it has a wooing charm that wins the hardest heart." He opened the box and pulled out an ebony flute inlaid with mother of pearl and filigree silver. "It is a love charm."

"A charm?" repeated Dorry politely.

"Yes. It is the flute of old Ab' Yussuf, now a venerable sheik, and patriarch of his tribe in the Arabian desert. He told me wonderful stories of its power to win the love of a maiden—just play it before her—that's what he said—and believe me he must have been a handsome rascal in his youth. I took the flute—I thought I might use it some day—but deuce take it all, the only girl I had ever fancied married while I was on that trip."

Dorry took the case and thanked the donor. "I feel like a fool, Mr. Wylie. I never played a flute."

"So much the better—just blow it gently in her ear, or under her window, or—somewhere—away from the house by all means," he added emphatically.

"Oh! I'll try the rose garden by moonlight tonight," muttered Dorry, looking very red. He hid the flute in his coat pocket for he heard Marion's light step on the stairs. "Tell her I will come over tonight—but don't tell her about the flute," he whispered, and slipping over the windowsill he disappeared among the trees that led to the side street.

It was not until after ten o'clock that he re-entered the Wylie grounds and made his way to the lovely rose garden which was overlooked by the south side of the old house. Marion's window was on that side and a faint light shone there behind rosy curtains. "I wonder if she looked for me tonight," he thought as he took out the flute. Never in his life had he played any musical instrument, and it was with some trepidation that he put the flute to his lips, and following Mr. Wylie's directions he blew softly.

The result was so wonderful that he charmed his own senses and sat down on a marble seat among the roses. The most entrancing music came wandering from the flute of the old Arab sheik. It was like all the love songs of the world—it played itself as Dorry blew gently into the mouthpiece. The wooing strains from the flute seemed to kiss the bending roses, seemed to meet the falling dew, seemed to lift up to Marion's windows. He forgot her for the moment—he was entranced with love itself!

All at once he saw a misty white form coming across the lawn; it drew nearer, nearer, and the moonlight shimmered on her golden hair—it was the girl he loved. Now she hurried a little as if drawn by the melody, until she ran breathlessly into the rose garden, and poised before him, a smile on her lovely face. As he dropped the flute and jumped up she turned and buried her face in a glorious clump of roses, pressing the cool fragrant petals to her hot cheeks.

"Dearest," whispered Dorry beside her.

"Dorry," she answered in a muffled tone, "were you playing that for me?"

"Of course."

"I thought when I heard it that some one had stolen Uncle Oliver's prized possession and I came out to rescue it, and it was only you playing to the moon!"

"Confound it all," said Dorry impatiently. "I knew it wouldn't work for a cent! You're only laughing at me after all!" He picked up the flute and turned away, but from among the roses her voice came sweet and low.

"Don't go, Dorry. Uncle Oliver meant well, but you don't need the flute to win my love, because—"

And Uncle Oliver gave them the flute for a wedding present, because he said he was actually afraid of its influence in the possession of a cunning beauty like Marion.

TUNNEY THINKS HEENEY FIGHT WILL NOT GO 15 ROUNDS

2 BIG RUGGED FELLOWS TO GO AFTER EACH OTHER

"ONE OF US IS LIKELY TO BE STOPPED BEFORE THE FINISH," SAYS CHAMPION

"I DO NOT EXPECT TO BE THAT ONE," CONTINUED TUNNEY

Speculator, N. Y., July 16.—(U.P.)—Gene Tunney does not think his heavyweight championship bout with Tom Heenev at Yankee stadium, July 26 will go the limit of 15 rounds.

"The fight is very apt not to go 15 rounds," the champion told the United Press today, "with two big rugged fellows like Heenev and me in there going after each other, one of us is likely to be stopped before the finish, and I do not expect to be that one."

Tunney believes he is stronger, faster and hitting harder today than he was in either of his two bouts against Jack Dempsey.

Asked if he thought his long lay-off from the ring during the past two years, in which he has boxed only 20 rounds in two bouts against Dempsey, had proved injurious Tunney said:

"The only way in which the layoff has hurt me is that I had trouble measuring my distance when I first started training about two months ago. But I am timing as good now as I ever did."

If the bout goes 15 rounds, Tunney is not afraid of his endurance and is confident that he will be stronger over the last five rounds than Heenev.

"Any man who can stay 15 rounds with Harry Greb three times, as I have, can go 15 rounds with any fighter in the ring today," Tunney said.

Tunney has engaged in five 15 round contests. He boxed Greb two 15 round bouts in 1923, winning both of them, and one 15 round bout in 1922, losing the decision. He defeated Martin Burke, New Orleans heavyweight, in 15 rounds in 1924 and Jeff Smith the same year over the same route.

Having taken Dempsey's best punches over 20 rounds, Tunney does not fear Heenev's punch.

"Some of Dempsey's wallop hurt me, but I took the best he had and came back for more," Tunney said. Tunney impressed the largest crowd that ever saw him work out at Speculator Sunday afternoon with his marvelous physical condition.

After the workout Tex Rickard, who had not seen Tunney in the ring since the Dempsey fight at Chicago, said he was surprised at the champion's condition.

"Tunney appears ready to go into the ring tonight to defend his title," Rickard said.

The official contract for the title bout was signed Sunday by Tunney and Gibson, and the champion gave Rickard his personal check for $10,000 as a guarantee of appearance for the bout July 26. The contract and check will be posted with the New York State athletic commission Tuesday.

New York, July 16.—(U.P.)—The next heavyweight title bout will be held in England if Tom Heenev defeats Gene Tunney in their championship match at Yankee stadium July 26. Tex Rickard announced today on his arrival from a visit to Gene Tunney's training camp at Speculator, N. Y.

"A bout in London between Heenev and Dempsey might draw more than a million," Tex opined.

Speculator, N. Y., July 16.—(U.P.)—Gene Tunney announced today that he would fly from Speculator to New York on the morning of July 26 for his heavyweight title bout with Tom Heenev.

It will be the first time in the history of pugilism that a heavyweight champion has flown from his training camp to the scene of the fight.

Tex Rickard was a little perturbed over Tunney's announcement. "I guess its all right if he gets a good pilot."

LOUGHRAN IS AN 11 TO 10 FAVORITE IN BOUT

LATZO REPUTED TO BE A MUCH BETTER ALL-AROUND PUNCHER

LOUGHRAN POPULAR AND WILL DRAW A RECORD CROWD

By HARRY FERGUSON (United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, July 16.—Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight champion, preached today from an old, familiar text.

"I will knock out Pete Latzo tonight," Loughran said.

The champion has said that before. He said it before his bout with Latzo at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, not long ago. Latzo was not knocked out; he lost on points.

Loughran is an 11 to 10 favorite, but it is not upon his punch that sportsmen are placing their faith and their money. They are banking upon his agile feet and crafty brain.

Lato is a better puncher. Strewn through his record are knockouts against Willie Harmon, Wyoming Warner and Eddie Burnsbrook. None of them is a first rater, but Loughran can show nothing so convincing.

Despite the absence of dynamite in his fists, Loughran is a popular young man and probably will draw a record crowd at Wilkesbarre.

Lato, a native of Scranton, Pa., is the hero of the Pennsylvania coal fields and is sure to have an army of backers at the ringside.

He will go into the ring weighing about 168 pounds, seven pounds lighter than Loughran. When the two last met, Loughran was glad to have the seven extra pounds.

Lato carried the fight to him throughout the first ten rounds, but the champion's weight advantage began to tell in the last five and Pete was slowly worn down. Tonight's bout will go only ten rounds.

If Loughran defeats Lato, he is going after bigger game. A victory tonight will prove Tommy is monarch of all he surveys in the light heavyweight class and he has announced his intention of crossing over into the heavyweight division, where greater glory and million-dollar gates beckon young men who disfigure one another for a living.

After Another Crown

By QUIN HALL

TONIGHT at Wilkesbarre, Pa., Pete Latzo gets his second crack at the crown worn by Tommy Loughran, the willing champion, which would indicate that the king of the light heavies does not fear the mauling of the former coal miner.

Only a few short weeks ago there was a Loughran-Lato engagement run off at Ebbets Field, the Brooklyn National League ball yard. In that setto it looked as if the champ had no walkaway. In fact, to many it seemed that Pete had rather the best of the early mixing and that Loughran did not start to make any inroads on the challenger until he let loose a steady bombardment to the Latzo kidneys, a fusillade of blows which quickly reddened up Pete's back and which most assuredly weakened him and took considerable elat from his early rushing tactics.

Following this scrap Loughran, a couple of weeks ago, met Armand Emanuel, the lawyer-fighter who came out of the West, at the Garden in New York. Loughran got the decision over the Coast boy, who was substituted for Jimmy Slattery, but it was roundly booed by the assembled customers and it seemed to be the consensus of opinion that Loughran didn't look nearly so much of a champion against Emanuel as he had in many of his other starts.

Loughran is a master boxer. He may sting an opponent with quick thrusts, but he totes no sleep-producing wallop. As a consequence the boys who are shooting at his tin hat seem to have no hesitancy in going in with great gusto, realizing that with these tactics they may let loose a killing blow and that Tommy can do them little harm even if he connects with everything that he has in the kitchen—including the cook stove.

Lato, the former welterweight king, has shown a lot of stuff since he has been performing as a light heavyweight. Aside from his recent bout with Loughran, Pete has met Lomski. And Lomski, according to the ring worms, is no cream puff. Lato went pell-mell into this scrap and was making a great play for the honors when Lomski let fly a low blow and Lato won on a foul.

Lomski, the Aberdeen Assassin, has always been noted for his furious rushes and uses a rip-tearing devil-may-care style which has put him up near the top of the division. Lato, however, took the play away from the Tiger man and for the minute and twenty-two seconds of the sixth round prior to the foul, the former welterweight boss fought with a fierceness which has seldom been seen. It was mad battling. Two rugged battlers using the same tactics. Both clawing for victory. Wham! A low blow and Lato sank to the canvas. A victory for the former miner but not the sort he would have craved. The blow was hardly intentional. Both were seeing red and under those circumstances unintentional fouls are easily possible and Lomski is not the type of fighter to resort to fouling to get him out of a tight place.

But the ringsiders were amazed at the mad sort of battling uncorked by Lato. It was the first time in his ring history that he had exhibited just those tactics and the close followers of boxing are wondering if he will use the same tactics against Loughran tonight at Wilkes-Barre.

This Lomski scrap won Lato his second try for the tin hat. Mad fighting tactics won him his chance and mad fighting tactics may lead to another championship for the former miner.

LOUGHRAN IS AN 11 TO 10 FAVORITE IN BOUT

LATZO REPUTED TO BE A MUCH BETTER ALL-AROUND PUNCHER

LOUGHRAN POPULAR AND WILL DRAW A RECORD CROWD

By HARRY FERGUSON

(United Press Staff Correspondent) New York, July 16.—Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight champion, preached today from an old, familiar text.

"I will knock out Pete Latzo tonight," Loughran said.

The champion has said that before. He said it before his bout with Latzo at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, not long ago. Latzo was not knocked out; he lost on points.

Loughran is an 11 to 10 favorite, but it is not upon his punch that sportsmen are placing their faith and their money. They are banking upon his agile feet and crafty brain.

Lato is a better puncher. Strown through his record are knockouts against Willie Harmon, Wyoming Warner and Eddie Burnbrook. None of them is a first rater, but Loughran can show nothing so convincing.

Despite the absence of dynamite in his fists, Loughran is a popular young man and probably will draw a record crowd at Wilkesbarre.

Lato, a native of Scranton, Pa., is the hero of the Pennsylvania coal fields and is sure to have an army of backers at the ringside.

He will go into the ring weighing about 168 pounds, seven pounds lighter than Loughran. When the two last met, Loughran was glad to have the seven extra pounds.

Lato carried the fight to him throughout the first ten rounds, but the champion's weight advantage began to tell in the last five and Pete was slowly worn down. Tonight's bout will go only ten rounds.

If Loughran defeats Lato, he is going after bigger game. A victory tonight will prove Tommy is monarch of all he surveys in the light heavyweight class and he has announced his intention of crossing over into the heavyweight division, where greater glory and million-dollar gates beckon young men who disfigure one another for a living.

After Another Crown

By QUIN HALL

TONIGHT at Wilkesbarre, Pa., Pete Latzo gets his second crack at the crown worn by Tommy Loughran, the willing champion, which would indicate that the king of the light heavies does not fear the mauling of the former coal miner.

Only a few short weeks ago there was a Loughran-Lato engagement run off at Ebbets Field, the Brooklyn National League ball yard. In that set to it looked as if the champ had no walkaway. In fact, to many it seemed that Pete had rather the best of the early mixing and that Loughran did not start to make any inroads on the challenger until he let loose a steady bombardment to the Lato kidneys, a fusillade of blows which quickly reddened up Pete's back and which most assuredly weakened him and took considerable elat from his early rushing tactics.

Following this scrap Loughran, a couple of weeks ago, met Armand Emanuel, the lawyer-fighter who came out of the West, at the Garden in New York. Loughran got the decision over the Coast boy, who was substituted for Jimmy Slatery, but it was roundly booed by the assembled customers and it seemed to be the consensus of opinion that Loughran didn't look nearly so much of a champion against Emanuel as he had in many of his other starts.

Loughran is a master boxer. He may sting an opponent with quick thrusts, but he totes no sleep-producing wallop. As a consequence the boys who are shooting at his tin hat seem to have no hesitancy in going in with great gusto, realizing that with these tactics they may let loose a killing blow and that Tommy can do them little harm even if he connects with everything that he has in the kitchen—including the cook stove.

Lato, the former welterweight king, has shown a lot of stuff since he has been performing as a light heavyweight. Aside from his recent bout with Loughran, Pete has met Lomski. And Lomski, according to the ring worms, is no cream puff. Lato went pell-mell into this scrap and was making a great play for the honors when Lomski let fly a low blow and Lato won on a foul.

Lomski, the Aberdeen Assassin, has always been noted for his furious rushes and uses a rip-tearing devil-may-care style which has put him up near the top of the division. Lato, however, took the play away from the Tiger man and for the minute and twenty-two seconds of the sixth round prior to the foul, the former welterweight boss fought with a fierceness which has seldom been seen. It was mad battling. Two rugged battlers using the same tactics. Both clawing for victory. Wham! A low blow and Lato sank to the canvas. A victory for the former miner but not the sort he would have craved. The blow was hardly intentional. Both were seeing red and under those circumstances unintentional fouls are easily possible and Lomski is not the type of fighter to resort to fouling to get him out of a tight place.

But the ringsiders were amazed at the mad sort of battling uncorked by Lato. It was the first time in his ring history that he had exhibited just those tactics and the close followers of boxing are wondering if he will use the same tactics against Loughran tonight at Wilkes-Barre.

This Lomski scrap won Lato his second try for the tin hat. Mad fighting tactics won him his chance and mad fighting tactics may lead to another championship for the former miner.

Dame Fashion
Smiles

By Grace Jewett Austin

Dame Fashion has just seen one of the most perfect complexions possible in this world. Its owner could wear any delicate shade or trying color with the utmost ease. The complexion was guileless of any faintest aid from art, and was of the genuine rose-leaf type. But, alas, it was the property of an athletic young man, and not a fair maiden! He declared that diet and exercise was the secret—and to have such a complexion most of the girls in the United States would be willing to live on orange juice, milk and raw eggs, which seemed to be his staff of life. But in spite of diet aids, after all such a complexion must be a gift of the fairies or a kindly Providence, and comes seldom to ordinary mortals.

Strolling homeward the other day Dame Fashion could not possibly resist the temptation to enter a friendly door and smell a great many beautiful blossoms. Gladiolus blooms, whether ising in a stately manner out of doors, or brought to the city from a fostering hot-house, are always among her special favorites. She has always declared that a corsage or boutonniere built around a single gladiolus bloom would have nearly an orchid value, and after she had been vigorously declaring this for awhile, they were good enough to pin one perfect gladiolus bloom on her gray coat, so that she could go on her way rejoicing.

Her next port of call was in another haven of rest, where tints like the flower and the leaf and the stems are all crystallized, kiln-fired and kept in forms of beauty. A friend came over to her and said, "What a good flower that is; how like the real!" Then she touched it, and said in surprise, "Why, it is real!" That was a tribute to the art of the modern coat-maker, whose works are so choice that they deceive the elect. For when Dame Fashion proudly declared, "Yes, this is a Pemberton," this flower lover replied, "Oh, you mean 'Mrs. Pemberton'—indeed, she is 'Mrs. Frank Pemberton'!"

After breaking the commandment about coveting a few score of times, when looking at choice glass, iridescent china pitchers and dishes beautiful enough to match quail, live lobsters and alligator pears, Dame Fashion made one last call for the day where all the good foods so abundant in America were heaped on high.

Here the funny fairies whispered, "How beautiful a strawberry, crepe gown would look, worn with a kohlrabi colored hat, a Spanish onion coat, and a soft fluffy fox around your neck, just the color of a twisted doughnut!"

Friiled and Caped Is
Chic Summer Costume

Here is the very costume to round out your summer wardrobe and the best of it is it's not particularly difficult to evolve. The circular cape with its scarf collar is one of the smartest wraps of the summer. The little surplice frock is very simple, three bands of shirring around the long waist make chic and unusual lines, while the plaited frill fulfills the vogue for ruffles and lends the dress a delightfully feminine charm. Beige crepe de chine polka-dotted in navy blue would be attractive for the frock as well as the lining of a navy crepe-la cape.—Woman's Home Companion.

While the world was still giving thanks for the rescue of Captains Mariano and Zappi and the recovery of the body of Dr. Finn Malmgren, another thrill came to it with the announcement by radio that the ice-breaker Krassin had smashed its way to the ice floe on which five more members of the Italia's crew were marooned and, after many difficulties, had taken them aboard. This group comprised Giuseppe Biagi, radio operator; Professor Behounek, meteorologist, and Lieutenant Viglieri, left to right at top; and Filippo Troiani, bottom left, and Natale Ceccioni. # 1 A. M. RAID QUASHES ROAD HOUSE HILARITY

Sheriff's Forces Find Bottle of Moonshine in Gateway Inn Kitchen

PROPRIETOR FINED $100

Dancers and Those Eating Fried Chicken Ordered to Leave

Several couples were dancing, others were singing in various booths between mouthfuls of chicken, a slot machine was clinking. Momentary silence followed by screams, muffled curses, and whispers of don't give your right names, and then a scramble of the discontented joy-makers as they crowded out the door at the curt commands of officers.

This is a picture told of the pandemonium that broke out at 1 a. m. Sunday when sheriff's forces raided the Gateway Inn, more commonly known as the "Chicken Shack," located two miles south of Nisswa on Highway No. 19.

Without warning Sheriff Claus Theorin, and Deputy Sheriffs Charles Oberg and Sam Bloomstrom, entered the chicken shack in the midst of much hilarity. Without disturbing the dancers the three went to the kitchen where they presented a search warrant and found a pin bottle partly filled with moonshine. With the evidence in their possession the three ordered the occupants to leave. Several present carried bits of fried chicken with them.

This morning George E. Smeltz, proprietor, entered a plea of guilty to the charge of maintaining a nuisance in municipal court before Judge J. H. Warner and was fined $100 and costs.

"We had received complaints that the Gateway Inn was selling liquor. While we did not find any great amount of liquor the place was noisy. Many of the occupants were returning from dances in the country. None of the occupants were arrested and no names were taken, said Sheriff Theorin.

RETURN FROM HIKE

Y. M. C. A. Boys Enjoy Outdoor Activity at Round Lake

A group of boys from the Y. M. C. A. have returned to their homes after making a hike to Round Lake near Mille Lacs Lake with I. L. Peterson secretary of the local "Y." The boys left the "Y." last Wednesday morning at 5 o'clock and made the 25 miles by noon without exertion.

Fishing, boating, horseshoe, kitenball, swimming, berry picking and camp duties kept the boys busy the entire time. Tents were pitched at Crescent Beach on the Conkin plot.

Those who made the hike were Raymond Lund, Robert Merrill, John Dahl, Maurice Larson, Robt. Block, Donald Block, Vernon Sinclair and I. L. Peterson. This is the sixth of a series of camps conducted by the Y. M. C. A. this year which have accommodated more than a hundred boys.

CONTINUE KUEHMICHEL CASE

Verdict on Reckless Driving Charge to be Given This Afternoon

Decision on the charge against Roy Kuehmichel of reckless driving was not reached Saturday afternoon and the case will be continued this afternoon at 5 p. m. allowing the court an opportunity to view the scene of the accident to verify certain bits of evidence that seemed to conflict.

Charge was brought against Kuehmichel when the Dodge coupe which he was driving struck the Dodge touring car driven by Joe Leitner as he was turning off of Kingwood street to the right up North Eighth street. The Kuehmichel car was traveling behind the Leitner car until the time of the accident and crashed into the right fender and running board when Leitner made a right hand turn while Kuehmichel thought he intended to make a left hand turn.

Kuehmichel was returning from work when the accident happened. A peculiar fact of the affair was that Leitner was only going ten miles an hour at the time of the accident and Kuehmichel was only traveling at about a 15 mile per hour rate.

PERFECT WEATHER AT CONVENTION

Minnesota Motor Trades Association Had Day of Recreation Saturday

WINNERS ARE NAMED

Closed With Formal Banquet, Followed by a Dance

Perfect weather Saturday featured the second and closing day of the Minnesota Motor Trades Association at Breezy Point Lodge. Horseshoe pitching, water events, trap shooting, golf, etc., featured the recreation party.

The golf tournament of the Minnesota Motor Trades Association was in charge of A. P. Krost, of Mankato, president of the Southern Minnesota Golf Association. The first day's bogey was won by B. E. Buggy of Blue Earth. The second day's bogey was won by G. S. Cunningham of the Automotive Journal of Minneapolis.

G. A. Lewis, Mankato, won the Motor Trades championship at golf, scoring 185 for 36 holes. Runner up in the second day's tournament was A. P. Krost. Mr. Lewis yesterday celebrated his sixtieth birthday.

The ladies bogey was won by Mrs. E. M. Doane, Austin. The finals champion in golf was Mrs. A. P. Krost, Mankato.

In the horseshoe finals, A. P. Tyrholm, Waseca, defeated L. M. Rochford, Minneapolis, 21 to 14.

The winners of the ladies bridge tournament were first Mrs. R. S. Curra, Red Wing; second Mrs. R. M. Tharp, New Ulm; third Miss Evelyn Powell, Marshall.

C. A. Vane, secretary of the National Automobile Dealers Association discussed problems of the dealers and used cars, and urged budgeting of the business and cooperation among the dealers. His talk was given at the business session. Roy A. Small, Cleveland, spoke of shop service and its relation to the sale of cars. It was voted to make the summer outing an annual affair.

At the banquet in the evening, Walt Cleland of St. Paul was toast-master and the speakers included lake region.

ROAD BELIEVED NOT GOOD FOUND IN BEST OF SHAPE

A party of Winnipeg tourists arriving at Brainerd today was delightfully nonplussed. That condition was brought about, S. R. Thompson and N. O. Spink, members of the party explained, by the fact that in Winnipeg they had been told that the road from Walker to Brainerd was not very good while in travelling over it, they found the road the best they had yet encountered on their tour.

The party of four proceeded this afternoon to Minneapolis after enjoying a dip in Lum Park waters. They will return within a week and spend a few days in the Brainerd lake region.

1 A. M. RAID QUASHES ROAD HOUSE HILARITY

Sheriff's Forces Find Bottle of Moonshine in Gateway Inn Kitchen

PROPRIETOR FINED $100

Dancers and Those Eating Fried Chicken Ordered to Leave

Several couples were dancing, others were singing in various booths between mouthfuls of chicken, a slot machine was clinking. Momentary silence followed by screams, muffled curses, and whispers of don't give your right names, and then a scramble of the discontented joy-makers as they crowded out the door at the curt commands of officers.

This is a picture told of the pandemonium that broke out at 1 a. m. Sunday when sheriff's forces raided the Gateway Inn, more commonly known as the "Chicken Shack," located two miles south of Nisswa on Highway No. 19.

Without warning Sheriff Claus Theorin, and Deputy Sheriffs Charles Oberg and Sam Bloomstrom, entered the chicken shack in the midst of much hilarity. Without disturbing the dancers the three went to the kitchen where they presented a search warrant and found a pint bottle partly filled with moonshine. With the evidence in their possession the three ordered the occupants to leave. Several present carried bits of fried chicken with them.

This morning George E. Smeltz, proprietor, entered a plea of guilty to the charge of maintaining a nuisance in municipal court before Judge J. H. Warner and was fined $100 and costs.

"We had received complaints that the Gateway Inn was selling liquor. While we did not find any great amount of liquor the place was noisy. Many of the occupants were returning from dances in the country. None of the occupants were arrested and no names were taken," said Sheriff Theorin.

RETURN FROM HIKE

Y. M. C. A. Boys Enjoy Outdoor Activity at Round Lake

A group of boys from the Y. M. C. A. have returned to their homes after making a hike to Round Lake near Mille Lacs Lake with I. L. Peterson secretary of the local "Y." The boys left the "Y." last Wednesday morning at 5 o'clock and made the 25 miles by noon without exertion.

Fishing, boating, horseshoe, kitenball, swimming, berry picking and camp duties kept the boys busy the entire time. Tents were pitched at Crescent Beach on the Conklin plot.

Those who made the hike were Raymond Lund, Robert Merrill, John Dahl, Maurice Larson, Robt. Block, Donald Block, Vernon Sinclair and I. L. Peterson. This is the sixth of a series of camps conducted by the Y. M. C. A. this year which have accommodated more than a hundred boys.

CONTINUE KUEHMICHEL CASE

Verdict on Reckless Driving Charge to be Given This Afternoon

Decision on the charge against Roy Kuehmichel of reckless driving was not reached Saturday afternoon and the case will be continued this afternoon at 5 p. m. allowing the court an opportunity to view the scene of the accident to verify certain bits of evidence that seemed to conflict.

Charge was brought against Kuehmichel when the Dodge coupe which he was driving struck the Dodge touring car driven by Joe Leitner as he was turning off of Kingwood street to the right up North Eighth street. The Kuehmichel car was traveling behind the Leitner car until the time of the accident and crashed into the right fender and running board when Leitner made a right hand turn while Kuehmichel thought he intended to make a left hand turn.

Kuehmichel was returning from work when the accident happened. A peculiar fact of the affair was that Leitner was only going ten miles an hour at the time of the accident and Kuehmichel was only traveling at about a 15 mile per hour rate.

BRAINERD'S ODDEST STORY OF TODAY

That Central Minnesota is enjoying good corn growing weather is evidenced by the experiment of W. J. Hall of Brainerd who attached a marker to a corn stalk. From 11 A. M. Sunday to 7:30 A. M. today the corn grew four inches.

DRIVES 80 MILES AN HOUR IN CHASE

Frank Hurley, chauffeur, driving his Minneapolis employer to Breezy Point Saturday, forfeited bail of $20 when overtaken in Brainerd by Motorcycle Patrolman Frank Brandt after a chase for several miles on Highway No. 27.

Officer Brandt reported that although the Cadillac driven by Hurley was a considerable distance in front of him he was unable to overtake it while travelling at a rate of 80 miles an hour.

SCATTER DESK PAPERS

Three Tubes Morphine Hypodermic Tables, Cocaine Hydrochloride Taken

Dope addicts were blamed by Chief of Police Thomas J. Templeton today for the robbery of 75 tablets of morphine hypodermic in three tubes and one bottle of cocaine hydrochloride containing 89 tablets from the office of Dr. C. E. Anderson, physician, Saturday night.

No trace was available today of the thieves. The office was entered between the hours of 11:20 p. m. Saturday and 10:30 a. m. Sunday. Dr. Anderson reported to the police. No other goods were stolen although papers on Dr. Anderson's desk were strewn about believed done while the search was being made for the drugs. A master key was used in securing entrance through the door.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

ALIDA RAY, pretty blue-eyed country girl, working as a stenographer in New York, is in love with Gary Chester, young engineer. Alida is living at the home of Marise de Rense, proprietor of the Harvest Moon cabaret. Marise, elderly and hard-working, is infatuated with Clive Mortimer, ne'er-do-well Englishman. The latter schemes, secretly, with Goldie de Rense, younger sister of Marise, to operate a private "post office" for blackmail Alida, conversing with Marise, casually mentions the name of her employer, W. B. Lingard. Marise gasps at sound of the name and slips to the floor in a faint. Revived by Alida, Marise intimates that she knew Lingard years before and hysterically warns Alida to leave his employ, but fails to explain why. At noon, that day Alida is hopeful of meeting Chester.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXII
ALIDA—waiting in the dressing-room with her hat and coat on, her ears keyed for the sound of Gary Chester's step when he should emerge from Lingard's inner office—found herself trembling.

"Fool that I am! To stoop to such a thing! Spying and watching!"

She went over to the tiny strip of mirror, and for the second time put a dab of powder on her face. He mustn't see that flush . . . that eagerness!

The moments slipped away. Was Gary never coming? She went back to the door again, her nerves a-strain. She opened it a little wider, peering through the crack.

Her hands were shaking. So suddenly she wished to see him! This waylaying—it wasn't really she—the proud Alida—who would hang about and stoop to this?

"I'm ashamed of myself. I'll go."

She started to draw on the blue kid gauntlets, fighting a little battle with herself, but somehow making delay . . .

"It isn't bold to want to thank him for his present!"

Yet, suppose the gloves had not been sent by him, after all?

Or suppose he had noticed her "keenness" yesterday, and in anxious recollection of the kiss, up-state, had thought the payment of the "forfeit" would delight her, just as it would delight any common girl?—hadn't he, in delirium, called her a milkmaid?

He thought of her as in that class, no doubt? Since he recollected the kiss, even the delirium had been a fake?

What did she know about this Gary Chester who had sent such a fever through her veins?

"I'll go! He thinks I'm common enough already!" she told herself, with a violent quiet. "I shouldn't have taken tea with him yesterday. I made myself cheap."

She flung the door wide open

and collided with Dolores on the mat.

"Mercy, child! You've been fifteen minutes in here, communing with yourself! Or were you getting all primed-up to meet a beau?"

Alida flushed scarlet. Because the Spanish girl's black eyes were sharp, she fibbed, saying, "I had a headache. I was resting."

"We'll lunch together," suggested Dolores, who had no swain to meet that day, and disliked her own company. "The fresh air will soon set you up." She drew out a shark-skin cigarette-case.

"While I'm fixing myself, you take a puff."

"Oh, no. I don't smoke," Alida drew back.

Dolores laughed mockingly. "Mama's little angel-face! Don't look so scared!"

She lit a cigarette herself, and—with the cigarette dangling from one corner of her mouth—proceeded with her toilette. She wore a dress of bright red crepe. It had a flaunting air. Her hat was of the same vermillion color.

Over her frock she donned a wrap of black satin.

"Don't look like a 'working girl' now, do I?" Dolores dropped the cigarette from her mouth, trod on it with her heel, and over the lips where the weed had dangled so precariously, she executed an artistic carmine curve. "That vivid enough, eh?" She regarded herself in the mirror, the lipstick poised in midair.

Alida stood nervously by the door, her ears—against her volition and pride—ever harking for Gary Chester's step.

She didn't want to meet him in the company of Dolores, who looked like a flaunting passion-flower!

She didn't want to meet him at all! she told herself.

"You dress too soberly," admonished Dolores, who had now applied a treble layer to her lips, and was ready to go out. "That suit's too school-girlly—and, my God, your hat! Don't you want men to see you're on the earth, my child?"

"NOW, just don't people have the hardest time of anybody?"

Clarice Mackay addressed this remark to the walls of her back hall bedroom. The room was frequently, and for long periods, her sole companion and listener since she had been sick and out of a job, so she conversed freely as she lounged in the shabby old chair by the window, her gray-blue eyes looking rather wistfully at the weather-bitten brick walls that faced her across the way.

After two weeks of sitting by that window she had learned a great deal about the families around her. She knew that there were five little tow-headed tots in one of the apartments that backed up close to her window. She knew that the father always shaved by the kitchen window, that the mother was small and energetic and always laughing.

One day Clarice was interested to know why there was so much bustling and excitement over there. The children seemed noisier and happier than ever; they ran around all day, squealing with laughter and chanting some ridiculous tuneless thing over and over: "Unkie tomin today, Unkie tomin today!" She could hear it through the open windows. The mother flew around from room to room but seemed to be concentrating her efforts in the kitchen. Clarice could see her mixing something in a bowl while the children stood excitedly around the edge of the table, then with a deft movement pouring it into a pan and putting it in the oven.

"Cake!" said Clarice to her room. "Somebody's coming to supper, I bet. Company! And I'm so lonesome!"

She tried to turn away from the window and concentrate on the book in her lap, but it was useless.

At last she threw down the book and leaving her chair put on her hat and went to the cafeteria three blocks up. She wasn't hungry, but she thought it might help to kill time and she simply couldn't stand to look out the window any more. She wished she had her old job back, but her boss had said that he could not turn off the substitute until she'd finished out her month. Besides, he told Clarice that more rest would be good for her.

When she returned to her room after supper the light was on in the apartment across the court and she had scarcely seated herself by the window when she saw a tall, youngish man walk into the tiny kitchen, followed by the father. He was greeted by wild screams of delight from the children, who dashed across the room and frantically hugged his legs while the mother went over and gave him a gay little peck on the cheek.

"Unkie, Unkie!" the children screamed, capering around him and trying to reach into his pockets.

The happiness and warmth of the family scene went through Clarice like a stab and she felt the quick tears rushing into her eyes. Jumping up she threw herself across the bed in the dark.

It was some time later that she heard a tap on her door, followed by a quick entrance and the voice of her landlady speaking as she found the button and switched on the light.

"Here's somebody to see you, dear," she said as Clarice looked up and recognized the little woman across the court standing behind the speaker.

"I'm Mrs. Watson. I grew up in the country," she laughed apologetically as she came into the room, "and I guess it's still sticking to me and makes me feel neighborly. I've been trying to come over and visit you for days. We've seen you sitting by the window and I knew you were sick and you seemed to be alone. My brother's just come to visit us for a few days and the children wouldn't give me any peace until I came over and asked you to have supper with us. I guess you think I'm crazy."

"Crazy?" echoed Clarice with a little catch in her voice. "I wish I could tell you how glad I am to go."

It was a hilarious evening that the girl spent in the Watson apartment. The children were too excited to be sane. They showed Clarice the toys Uncle Jack had brought them and played with her as if they'd known her all their little lives. After they had gone to bed the four grownups settled down to a game of bridge and it was nearly twelve o'clock when Uncle Jack finally escorted Clarice back home.

He had only planned to spend the week end at his sister's, but the days dragged out into a week and it was on the last evening as he was taking Clarice home that he turned and took her in his arms.

"Clarice, I guess you think I work fast," he whispered, "but, honey, I must go back tomorrow and I want to find out where I stand with you before I leave. I know you have a wonderful job and maybe you'd rather live in town than out on the farm with me—but I do love you with my whole heart and I'd do anything in the world to make you happy. Can't you love me a little?"

Clarice looked up at him and smiled soberly.

"I feel that if I did give up my job and city life I'd be getting something—well worth while in exchange," she said simply.

And he—oh, well, you know the rest.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

ALEDA RAY, pretty blue-eyed country girl, working as a stenographer in New York, is in love with Gary Chester, young engineer. Alela is living at the home of Marise de Rense, proprietor of the Harvest Moon cabaret. Marise, elderly and hard-working, is infatuated with Clive Mortimer, ne'er-do-well Englishman. The latter schemes, secretly, with Goldie de Rense, younger sister of Marise, to operate a private "post office" for blackmail. Alela, conversing with Marise, casually mentions the name of her employer, W. B. Lingard. Marise gasps at sound of the name and slips to the floor in a faint. Revived by Alela, Marise intimates that she knew Lingard years before and hysterically warns Alela to leave his employ, but fails to explain why. At noon, that day Alela is hopeful of meeting Chester.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXII
ALEDA—waiting in the dressing-room with her hat and coat on, her ears keyed for the sound of Gary Chester's step when he should emerge from Lingard's inner office—found herself trembling.

"Fool that I am! To stoop to such a thing! Spying and watching!"

She went over to the tiny strip of mirror, and for the second time put a dab of powder on her face. He mustn't see that flush . . . that eagerness!

The moments slipped away. Was Gary never coming? She went back to the door again, her nerves a-strain. She opened it a little wider, peering through the crack.

Her hands were shaking. So ardently she wished to see him! This waylaying—it wasn't really she—the proud Alela—who would hang about and stoop to this? "I'm ashamed of myself. I'll go."

She started to draw on the blue kid gauntlets, fighting a little battle with herself, but somehow making delay.

"It isn't bold to want to thank him for his present!"

For suppose the gloves had not been sent by him, after all?

Or suppose he had noticed her "keenness" yesterday, and in amused recollection of the kiss, up-state, had thought the payment of the "forfeit" would delight her, just as it would delight any common girl?—hadn't he, in delirium, called her a milkmaid?

He thought of her as in that class, no doubt? Since he recollected the kiss, even the delirium had been a fake?

What did she know about this Gary Chester who had sent such a favor through her veins?

"I'll go! He thinks I'm common enough already!" she told herself, with a violent quiet. "I shouldn't have taken tea with him yesterday. I made myself cheap."

She flung the door wide open

and collided with Dolores on the mat.

"Mercy, child! You've been fifteen minutes in here, communing with yourself! Or were you getting all primed-up to meet a beau?"

Alela flushed scarlet. Because the Spanish girl's black eyes were sharp, she fibbed, saying: "I had a headache. I was resting."

"Well, lunch together," suggested Dolores, who had no swain to meet that day, and disliked her own company. "The fresh air will soon set you up." She drew out a shark-skin cigarette-case.

"While I'm fixing myself, you take a puff."

"Oh, no. I don't smoke," Alela drew back.

Dolores laughed mockingly. "Mama's little angel-face! Don't look so scared!"

She lit a cigarette herself, and with the cigarette dangling from one corner of her mouth—proceeded with her toilette. She wore a dress of bright red crepe. It had a flaunting air. Her hat was of the same vermilion color.

Over her frock she donned a wrap of black satin.

"Don't look like a 'working girl' now, do you?" Dolores dropped the cigarette from her mouth, trod on it with her heel, and over the lips where the weed had dangled so precariously, she executed an artistic carmine curve. "That vivid enough, eh?" She regarded herself in the mirror, the lipstick poised in midair.

Alela stood nervously by the door, her ears—against her volition and pride—ever harking for Gary Chester's step.

She didn't want to meet him in the company of Dolores, who looked like a flaunting passion-flower! She didn't want to meet him at all she told herself.

"You dress too soberly," admonished Dolores, who had now applied a treble layer to her lips, and was ready to go out. "That suit's too school-girl—and, my God, your hat! Don't you want men to see you're on the earth, my child?"

(Copyright, 1928, King Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

She caught Alela by the arm, quite friendly, despite her pert criticism. Her sharp eyes lighted on the gloves. "Parisian! Where on earth did you get 'em?"

"They were a present," Alela stiltedly said. She felt she really could not bear Dolores, at this moment.

But she had no reasonable excuse for not leaving the building with the girl.

The elevator shot them downward with a crowd of others, and soon the two were out in the thoroughfare.

Dolores was masterful. She conducted the country maid across Wall Street, up a block or two, and into a lunch-room.

"We'll go fifty-fifty," She ordered for herself a highly seasoned Spanish dish. "Red pepper and chili go with my volcanic temperament." She gave Alela a wink. She mocked at the latter's selection of tea and scrambled eggs.

Alela but half listened while Dolores rambled on. Was Gary Chester still closeted with William B.? He probably had left the building now? Had he given a thought in her direction when he passed her empty desk?

Marise's curious fainting spell! Odd how the mere mention of Mr. Lingard's name had wrought such havoc in Marise!

"Men are all the same," she suddenly heard Dolores saying, in her quick staccato voice. "They like style and dash and flattery and money and position in a woman—that's what gives the Countess Dellamancas such a flying start!"

"Mr. Lingard's niece, you mean?" Alela's thoughts turned to Gary Chester. Hadn't Dolores once told her that this woman was "crazy" over the young man?

"Yep. The beautiful huntress. The danger-sign."

Twenty minutes later, just as the two girls neared the office building, up to the curb drew a long, luxurious car. In the tonneau was a lovely ash blonde lady in a Summer toilette that was exquisite.

Dolores nudged Alela, whispered slangily: "Pipe the boss's niece!"

At that moment, out from the building stepped Gary Chester. The lady in the car leaned from the window, signalled to him. He hurried towards her, sweeping his hat from off his head. They spoke together. He hesitated—she pleaded.

"Didn't I tell you so?" triumphantly whispered Dolores, as they saw young Chester—smiling and apparently in the best of spirits—drive off in the Countess Dellamancas's limousine.
